I believe I can add value to the new National Council and Board if elected. My Background Born in Hull, I am now 62, married with three children and will have three grandchildren by spring 2019!

I worked in Financial Services from 1975 until semi retirement in 2015. The last 25 years of my career was working with major UK and International quoted companies advising on Employee Share Plans which involved working with both senior executives to junior employees.

I became involved with football fans groups in early 2013, initially protesting against police travel restrictions for Hull City fans at Huddersfield on Easter Saturday. Since then I was involved with the Hull City Name Change campaign "No To Hull Tigers", becoming a director of the "City Till We Die" protest group, helped re-launch the supporters trust to form Hull City Supporters Trust in 2015, where I've been Chairman since March 2016.

The last five years have been busy but that's given me great experience working on the campaigns mentioned earlier. We say locally "It's never dull in Hull" and that's certainly been true at Hull City under our current ownership. We have ongoing unfinished business with our fight to restore all Concessions and re-engage with our club in meaningful dialogue. These campaigns have given me experience working with both FSF and SD, where I sat on the National Council, fellow clubs supporters, local authorities and MPs. I've also attended Dialogue meetings with FSF and SD representing Hull City fans with two Premier League and two EFL meetings. Only last month developments with a potential investor for Hull City led to an offer made to me for HCST to work with a consortium to buy the club. That made headlines but shows how even at the top level of the football pyramid there's still a place for supporters trusts in the modern game.

My Vision

I'm told I'm a good communicator and I'm determined to use past experiences and contact network to represent supporters in the modern game. Supporters have been ignored for too long by the football authorities. They and clubs can take liberties because of our passion and loyalty. I believe the time is now right for the supporters movement to unite working within the game with politicians to reclaim OUR game.

I want to effect positive change as part of our new supporter organisation.

Goronwy Brookes

There is work to be done to keep supporters at the forefront of our game. We are reaching key points in campaigns on Stand Up For Choice, maintenance of the Away Ticket Price Cap, Fan Fare pricing for train travel for supporters and the strengthening of structured dialogue between fans, clubs and football governing bodies. I want to bring the experience I have accumulated at local, regional and national level to work on behalf of supporters to fight for our collective interests. Football Without Fans Is Nothing.

My nomination is backed by the Spirit of Shankly Management Committee to represent our views and interests in the new National Committee and continue our long and established history in national supporter representation.

Spirit of Shankly have been at the forefront of supporter engagement, activism, organisation and representation for the past decade and are recognised as a leading supporter organisation with reach to 150,000 twitter followers. During that time we have delivered victories on ticket price campaigns, securing price freezes after our 77th minute walkout in February 2016 and organised the march on the Premier League offices in June 2013 paving the way for the £30 away ticket price cap.

I have been the secretary of Spirit of Shankly for the past two years, overseeing the governance structure and arrangements including the creation of an Executive Committee as a decision making body.

I have been heavily involved in Spirit of Shankly's campaign on Safe Standing, including the extensive consultation process leading up to our open vote, receiving 27,000 responses, and I participated in our visit to Celtic's safe standing section. I have expertise in the history of Sports Stadium safety legislation. The issues we are faced with in the debate for safe standing are not new, they are themes and attitudes that have been pervasive for decades.

I have extensive structured dialogue experience. Through the meetings with the Premier League I have developed a deep understanding of how they work as an organisation. I sit on Liverpool FC's Stadium supporter forum, dealing with all issues supporters have in relation to Anfield, its expansion and problems that occur in how the Club treats supports.

The National Council of the new organisation is the best forum to bring my experience to bear to fight for supporters across the Premier League and beyond and it would be an honour to be elected to represent the Premier League network.

Malcolm Clarke

I support Stoke City home and away. If Stoke aren't playing and York City are I'm usually there. I have been chair of the FSF since 2002 and have represented supporters on the FA Council since 2007. I worked with Stoke City to establish a democratic Supporters Council for dialogue with the Club and was its first Chair. I have a long track record of successfully working for supporters' interests at both club and national level.

The Trust philosophy

Although my national role has been with the FSF, it might easily have been with SD. I am an advocate of part or full supporter ownership of clubs where it can be achieved and of co-operative principles (I am a member of the Co-operative party)

I was the first Chair of the Potters Trust, which later merged with the Supporters Club of which I am a committee member (but unfortunately not as a Trust because of the then stringent SD audit requirements, ironically subsequently relaxed).

I am a Life Member of York City Supporters Trust, playing my part in its successful fight to save the club and take ownership of it in 2003. I chaired the Trust meeting in 2006 which decided to sell a 75% stake to JMP Ltd. This year I supported the Trust in responding to the Club Chairman's demand to gift the remaining shares to him, and spoke on that at two large meetings. I am also a member of the Enfield Town Trust.

My vision

The new united organisation can be more than the sum of our founding parts, to become the truly effective champions of supporters' interests at all levels. We know we are right, but being right is not enough. We must translate that into real change for supporters benefit.

This will not happen automatically .We must work together to make it happen by making the best use of our volunteer, staffing and financial resources, not only at the "top" of the organisation but also mobilising the skills and passion of our members. I can help make that vision happen.

Outside football

Now retired, I started as an academic, before moving into public sector senior management, up to Chief Executive level. I have been a non-executive on several QUANGOS. I still serve on the Information Rights Tribunal. I have extensive senior level experience of governance in both executive and non-executive roles.

Pete Daykin

I have been a match-going fan since 1981, for most of the 1990s I wrote for, edited and produced Sunderland fanzines and have been a member of the FSF's National Council since 2004. In 2011, I co-founded The Blizzard Football Quarterly.

Over the years I have tried to involve myself in as wide a variety of the FSF's activities as possible, at different stages giving time to:

- Running the FSF's Standing Campaign
- Sitting on the National Council and Executive Committee – I am currently elected to the FSF Board and was a member of the Interim Board for the new, unified, organisation
- Setting up, running and handing over the original FSF office in Sunderland
- The FSF's Fans' Embassy service, with whom I was in Russia this Summer
- On-the-ground campaigning with fans in the Northeast
- Editorial direction and production of the Federation's communications, now passed on to Michael Brunskill

I hope to be elected to National Council of the new organisation to continue my work as co-ordinator of the Standing Campaign, developments in which are, I hope, self evident.

May's Stand Up For Choice Campaign, which we launched jointly with the Football League, represented the first time the FSF had ever campaigned directly with one of our core football family partners, garnering some 34,000 survey responses in the process (94% in favour of standing areas at football).

Its fallout precipitated the current DCMS review into the subject and in recent months we have worked closely with the various footballing authorities – EFL, Premier League, SGSA etc. – to form a coalescence of strategy around this process.

At the time of writing, we can be cautiously optimistic about the direction of travel. While there is much to do, the review remains the first time in 29 years DCMS has strayed even marginally from its all-seater policy.

In real life I run a digital agency and recently launched an ai/linguistics startup, Wordnerds, that teaches computers to understand unstructured text. I hope my business experience gives me a commercial perspective that colleagues on the FSF and interim boards have found useful.

I play the game competitively, albeit at an appallingly low standard, without pace, grace or talent of any description, but with an enthusiasm that borders on the embarrassing for someone of my age.

Rick (Richard) Duniec

I am currently an elected member of the outgoing FSF-NC and former Leeds Supporters Trust Chairman with resultant inevitable experience of football's ownership, governance, and financial issues (including the EFL financial administration processes) and of Shaun Harvey.

Attended FS Europe Barcelona10, Copenhagen11, Istanbul12, Amsterdam13, Bologna14, Belfast15, Ghent17 and Gijon18.

Extensive experience meeting with the EFL, F.A., M.P.s, and Local Government.

Numerous interviews and appearances in media including newspaper, radio, television, and football related documentaries, though none recently.

Graduate of the University of East Anglia; worked in The City before moving to sales with Kalamazoo in UK, & Sales Management in Arabian Gulf states including time working in Qatar. 10 years as an IFA, registered with the FCA.

In many ways the experience I have gained regards the real workings of football is something that I would have much preferred not to have been forced, by circumstances, to acquire. I wish to continue to put that knowledge and experience to wider use and for the greater benefit of Football Supporters as a whole. I feel that the NC is the best place to achieve this aim, alongside like minded colleagues. Much progress has been made and this should be acknowledged but I remain comfortable in bringing supporters issues to bear at the most senior levels which have included pressing issues with the FA, EFL, Sports Ministers, MPs, including the DCMS Select Committee.

Whilst I take interest in a broad spectrum of fans issues my primary concerns will be to continue involvement in Football Governance, Finance and Regulation. I have an active interest in the way the Rail operators market to Football Fans and in particular I am seeking greater flexibility in validity of rail tickets when fixtures are changed.

I intend to progress concepts regarding football heritage issues and seek to achieve some regulatory degree of separation between the club as a business which can be bought and sold, and the club as "construct" (its heritage, etc.) which cannot and should not.

My objectives over several years have been to seek a greater involvement for fans in football in general and to strive to deter their inappropriate financial exploitation. Essentially I believe that fans require and deserve a fair return on their "investment" in their clubs (both emotional and financial) and in football more generally.

Roger Ellis

I am a lifelong supporter of Coventry City FC. I have been Secretary of the Sky Blue Trust for the last five years, in which time we have battled with the owners - SISU - over various challenges to the very existence of our Club.

I have become active in the supporters' movement nationally. I have attended all the "Structured Dialogue" meetings between FSF/SD and the EFL since 2016, representing L1 and L2 Clubs, challenging Shaun Harvey on numerous issues such as "crisis clubs", safe standing, the scheduling of matches, etc. I was elected to the SD England and Wales Football Council in 2017. I spoke at the Supporters' Summit in 2017. I am a member of a working group of FSF and SD representatives developing proposals to reform the regulation of football. We hope this may deliver progress towards a new approach to tackling the owners and directors of "crisis clubs."

I spent 36 years as a solicitor and manager in Local Government before retiring in 2012. I had professional dealings with a number of football clubs and their owners - notably with Robert Maxwell, during his notorious spell owning Oxford United in the 1980s.

Formation of the new supporters' organisation is a key step. Football clubs are the greatest expression of community identity in our nation. For too long, too many owners of clubs have treated them as mere chattels and supporters as no more than sources of income. The game's future depends upon greater recognition of the crucial contribution which supporters make, especially when they are actively engaged in the running of clubs.

If elected I will hope to address many issues facing the game - such as its gross financial imbalance; the need for much better backing for the grassroots; the quest for more inclusive, welcoming and non-discriminatory clubs which encourage people from all backgrounds to enjoy their football with pride and in safety; and the improvement of the way clubs engage with their supporters.

I will also do what I can to try to bring about a change in the regulation of the game so that owners have to exercise proper stewardship, not just of their club's balance sheet, but also of the immense value of supporters' loyalty and the heritage and tradition which clubs bring to their host communities.

Tom Greatrex

I am putting my name forward to be a part of the Premier League network group, but also to offer some continuity from the predecessor organisations, as the new, unified national supporters group gets up and running. During the course of the discussions ahead of both FSF and SD AGMs in the summer, a strong case was made for the benefits of bringing together the aims objectives and missions of both in a single organization which could focus on the benefits to supporters of both effective organisation and campaigning capacity on a wide range of issues. Having been closely involved in the development of the options put to the Supporters Direct and FSF memberships, I want to see the decision made by our memberships put into place in the most effective way possible. That means ensuring that those involved in both predecessor organisations are able to be part of the new representative structures, so that a new unified culture can be developed – taking the best from both into one mission, rather than entrenching positions from previous groups.

I believe that the root of many of the problems encountered by fans on a match is in poor governance and a failure to take into account the opinion, perspective and abilities of fans when crucial decisions are made. Providing strong representation and a framework for real and effective structured dialogue between recognised supporter organisations and their clubs is an important element of minimising the risk of the type of crisis situation which has engulfed many clubs over the years. Despite the financial resources available to Clubs playing at the top level in England and Wales, there are Clubs that are poorly run, who operate on a precipice and could very easily find themselves in a crisis situation. While community ownership of clubs at the top level may now seem to be a distant prospect, the ethos of supporter involvement, engagement and dialogue are as relevant in the Premier League as in non-league.

As Chair of the Fulham Trust, with a memorandum of understanding developed with the Club to underpin our structured dialogue, and having been chair of Supporters' Direct and latterly a supporter representative on the FA Council, I am keen to put that relevant experience to good use as we forge a new organisation focused on demonstrating the beneficial value that supporters bring to the way in which football is run.

Kristine Green

Although I have only served around 15 months on the previous national council of FSF I feel that this invaluable experience will stand me in good stead to help any completely new council to progress during what will be a bedding in period. This will be helped with my 100% record in attending council and fan rep meetings as well as being active with email and telephone communications.

Outside of the FSF national council I have worked with Supporters Direct as a board member of the Mariners Trust in various aspects including a new MOU between the trust and Grimsby Town FC. It has been a long process involving meetings at various levels but one that I have not shied away from when hard work was needed. I have also worked closely with Level Playing Field as an Executive Trustee giving me both insight and knowledge into this area which again I feel would benefit a new council make up of a new organisation.

In the last three years I have built up a reputation with fans of Grimsby Town as somebody that they can talk to, somebody that they can trust and ultimately somebody that will work hard to get across their fears, worries and frustrations – whatever they may be.

This work has included time as the clubs Supporter Liaison Officer which opened up engagement with other clubs about various issues but also with Amanda Jacks of the FSF and various police forces.

The work I did around our troubles at Stevenage last season was praised and gave me a skill set to be able to communicate with people from various organisations that didn't always agree with the viewpoint that I put across but still dealt with this amicably. It also showed that I can be discrete and trusted with confidential information.

As a final point; I am currently in my 2nd year of my honour's degree in Public Relations. While on the face of it this may not seem applicable I feel that the knowledge and skills picked up during this time can only be of benefit should they be required both internally and externally through the setting up period of the new organisation or in the future.

Michael Green

Michael Green – standing for the new National Council as an Individual member. I am standing for National Council to ensure the voice of those wanting an independent, radical and sustainable unified fans organisation is heard. As a Supporters Direct board member in 17-18 I saw at first hand the process that drove and brought us to the decisions made in July and I hope to bring my enquiring strategic experience to bear in order the Unified Football Supporters Organisation (UFSO) is a campaigning, democratic/governance, diversity and representative success.

I am a Leeds United season ticket holder, an ex Chair of the Leeds United Supporters Trust, a recently stood down board member of Supporters Direct and currently on the England and Wales Football Council of SD. Prior to my Trust activity I was a activist and blogger around the fertile territory of awful club ownership that was Leeds United 2000-2017. In my work life I am a senior manager in the Volunteer Services sector and before that was a Public Affairs and political organisation practitioner.

The new unified body has a long list of challenges to face going forward, not least of which is to understand how to ensure the reality of Fans Fund/Football Foundation largesse does not spike the guns when promoting the interests of football supporters on the national stage or dealing with governing bodies, leagues, clubs, the police and related football stakeholders. Intertwined with that short-term consideration is the long-term need to make the UFSO sustainable, which will include diversified funding. I fully support the UFSO evolving into a cooperative society/CIC.

Whilst all that vital organisational bedding in is accruing the National Council and board will need to ensure we keep an eye on the ball around a plethora of football related issues. Whether its defending fans rights, supporting those in legal need, pressurising the FA/PL/EFL on ownership standards/the supporters match day experience/TV games issues etc. the UFSO needs in 2019 to not only to replicate the best of what the FSF and SD provided but to expand its reach and influence. Football supporters need to know the UFSO is its voice and fearless champion.

I will be in attendance on November 22nd to answer any questions. Regardless of the outcome of this election process I will be looking to promote the ethos of independent, radical and sustainable, from an individual member's perspective.

Tim Hartley

The new unified organisation must deliver for ALL supporters. That means building meaningful networks in the leagues as well as speaking with one voice for ordinary fans, supporters clubs and trusts.

I have followed Cardiff City for forty years and helped set up our Supporters' Trust. During my eight years as Chair I established regular meetings with the club to discuss fans' concerns over governance as well as bread and butter issues. Our most important campaign was to get our club playing in blue after the owner tore up a hundred years of tradition and made us play in red. My wife though says that the best thing I did was to get mirrors in the women's' toilets. The big issues and the small changes are equally important to fans.

I am Vice Chair of Supporters Direct and sit on the National Council of the FSF. It was only after pressure from supporters that the government set up a working group to spell out how fans should be represented. I gave evidence to that inquiry and pushed hard for fans to have a second representative on the FA Council.

I was a journalist with the BBC, Head of News in the Welsh Government and then worked in public affairs. I now write about travel and football and work as a consultant. I am a director of the Co-operative News and the Welsh Football Trust and set up the Wales supporters' children's charity.

We need to ensure the game is still played and run for the benefit of us, its true owners, the supporters. We will lobby, carry out research and devise policy. Be it ticket pricing, policing, setting up trusts or promoting good governance we can reform the game as a whole as well as campaign on single issues. With some 500,000 members behind us we have changed the way football is run. I want to continue to help the movement we have built together to be a success.

James Horrax

I have been a football fan ever since I can remember. Having become a father 20 months ago, I am determined to ensure that my son (and any other children I may have) can grow up to enjoy the game in the same way I have. That means supporting supporters of all levels of the game up and down the pyramid system.

By representing their interests across areas like ticket prices, travel, security, inclusivity, youth participation and facilities, only then can our game be given to the next generation better than we ourselves received it.

Chris Johnson

Since the age of seven I have been involved with football both as a player and a supporter . I became an apprentice in 1965 at Tottenham Hotspur F.C and spent four years at the club. At the age of Nineteen I suffered a career ending injury.

I have supported my country and established many contacts while raising money for charity. I ran my Owen business for some thirty years and qualified as an Institute of Directors .

I am Ambassador for Burnley Football Club Disabled Supporters Association and been instrumental in forming and progressing the Association . I am also a member of the Clarets Trust Board .

My number one aim is to enhance the match day experience of all supporters particularly the disabled supporters . I am particularly keen to ensure that the Association is represented with as much diversity and equality as possible . I thank you for reading my profile and look forward to your support .

Mark Jordan

At present I believe there hasn't enough done to bring supporters together from the nations fanbase, where many choose to belong to official groups, remain solely independent or who have concerns about joining a national entity.

At Leeds United who I follow religiously home and away and for whom I organise an official regional travel group, we've experienced hostility and inverted snobbery from our own fans which has often resulted in abuse especially on social media. What I'd like to see is a more open and tolerant approach to wholesale supporter engagement, whilst at the same time upholding the values and integrity of an independent and vocal national fans vehicle.

Its important given the almost weekly changing nature of a game undermined by the unfathomable amounts of money being pumped into the Premier League, that the fans unite for the greater good and ensure it remains affordable for generations to come.

Allied to that I'd also like to see all discrimination removed from every aspect of support, and the perpetrators removed and prevented from further involvement. I also think its important for fans to behave responsibly at matches and would like to see a more mature attitude adopted towards alcohol; also in line with that more done to make the game attractive to families and young people. Pricing too is critical and I'd like to see more done to push clubs on responsible charges for tickets, especially away fans who often bear the brunt of this.

Neil Le Milliere

I'm 65, married to Julie, who I married on the pitch at Exeter at her suggestion! I've always been an Exeter City "fan" although I left Exeter in 1966 for Kent.

From 1980, I, with my brother, became "supporters" going to more and more games, home and away, hooked for life by our 1981 FA cup run. I've played football and/or been involved in football administration for 51 years and feel qualified to represent supporters' views on a national supporters' organisation.

SUPPORTER INVOLVEMENT BACKGROUND

My background includes:

Being actively involved with the Exiled EC Supporters Group in London since 1984;

Being a member of the EC Supporters Club for a similar period;

Running an Internet Mail Group for Exeter fans since 1999 and sending out news and trips emails to a couple of thousand fellow supporters.

Being involved with APFSCIL and acting as Secretary and Travel Secretary since 2006;

Attending almost all home and away games and being recognised by being made EFL Supporter of other Year in 2013.;

Being a founding member of the EC Supports Trust and have served on the initial committee then the Board continuously since 2000 save for a mandatory year's absence;

Being on the Supporters Direct Board continuously since 2005; later also Chair of their England and Wales Council and Chair of the Governance Sub-Committee;

Being on the Trustees Advisory Board of Kick it Out before this body was abolished;

Holding a position on an FA Compliance Monitoring Group representing supporters;

And Volunteering at the Club running a real ale/cider bar at every home match for the last fifteen years or so.

WHAT I CAN OFFER

With this wealth of involvement, I feel qualified to represent supporters' view and opinions and to help specifically with advising supporters on the setting up of a supporters' trust and ownership of a club.

I invite you to vote for me and promise to continue to work towards getting supporters views and opinions moved to the top of every agenda. I'll also strive to help those supporters who want to, to get involved with the running and owning of their clubs where possible; combining this with ensuring that clubs are community focussed, fully involving those communities in the life of the football club and vice versa.

Fiona McGee

I have been a football fan for as long as I can remember and have been a member of the FSF (and before that, the FSA) for over 20 years.

I originally got involved with the organisation as a result of my involvement in Leeds Fans United Against Racism and Fascism, before going on to become a volunteer for the Fans' Embassy teams. I also led the Fans for Diversity research on women's experiences as fans of the men's game and wrote the 'Women at the Match' report (2015).

I have been a member of both the FSF's National Council and Board of Services for the past 4 years and am a member of the current Interim Board charged with overseeing the establishment of the new Unified Supporters' Organisation. I am also involved in football in a number of ways via my professional life.

As an Associate Researcher for Substance, I have worked on and helped to co-write briefing papers for Supporters Direct (e.g. Business Advantages of Supporter Community Ownership in Football). I have worked for Show Racism the Red Card helping to research and write educational materials using football to talk to young people about racism. I currently work for a grassroots football project based in Brixton, which uses football as tool to tackle wider social issues, including mental health, knife crime, literacy and community cohesion.

Through the work that I have done in my professional life, and through my own experiences of being a football fan, I am interested in issues to do with diversity, supporter ownership, transparent governance and how to ensure fans are getting a fair deal.

David Michael

The importance of supporter Issues and club-fan communication were very much the starting points for me setting up My Old Man Said (MOMS) over seven years ago. As an Aston Villa supporter, I was actually appalled by how a football club could be so blindsided to their own supporters.

If I've done anything in the following years of being actively involved in supporter issues, it's evolving more of a 'can do' attitude at the club towards their fans and making sure they are at the heart of all club conversations.

At club level, I've done everything from helping supporters avoid wrongful banning orders in the courts, to using the national press to challenge and spotlight previous owners poor running of the club.

I've successfully got Villa Park recognised as an Asset of Community Value, played a key part in relaunching the Villa Supporter's Trust, and spearheaded FSF campaigns such as Twenty's Plenty and Safe Standing at club level.

I'm a founder member of the Aston Villa Fan Consultation Group (FCG), which has been a positive example of good practice in English football of Structured Dialogue. It has survived three different owners during its existence – a good sign of its worth! In the past year, I am proud to have helped empower the Aston Villa Disable Supporters Association to be active and constructive stakeholders in their club, both in getting a place at the FCG and the away supporter sub-group of the FCG.

As well as being a keen FSF member attending both EFL club rep meetings and before that, Premier League club ones (including attending a couple of FSF marches in London and activity supporting Twenty's Plenty), I have contributed to Safe Standing advisory meetings at the Home of Commons, plus other meetings advising of political policy.

Recently, I joined the West Midlands Police Football Unit Independent Advisory Group (IAG), which was the first of its kind in the country.

I have also been a member of Football Europe Supporters (FSE) for as long as I have the FSF, and have attended a couple of their European meets to keep tabs on European developments and good practice.

All this has enabled me to gather experience and knowledge to better serve supporters in a well-rounded and common sense manner. Football for me makes up a holy trinity of interests, alongside both film and music, which I'm involved in as a journalist/publisher.

Martin O'Hara

I have been the Deputy Chair of the FSF for the last 7 years and I'm immensely proud of the status and achievements of the FSF during that time. Prior to that I was a National Council member for a period of some years and was actively involved in several of the workgroups gaining experience of all current issues. I also been a current board director of the FSF.

In addition I am also secretary of the Viking Supporters Cooperative at DRFC and a supporters' board member. In recent years we have been subjected to hostile takeover bids by offshore hedge fund companies which I am proud to say that I helped resist in the strongest possible terms. Despite threats of legal action and other less salubrious acts we stood firm and now have ownership that have the best interests of the club at heart. I currently advise the club on all supporter issues. During my time with the FSF I have participated in all the various campaigns, workgroups and activities. This gives me extensive experience and a knowledge base that encompasses everything that is current to supporters at all levels, this would include International football as well as the league structure in England and Wales. The issues which I have extensive knowledge of would be governance, safe standing, away fan experience, Policing and stewarding, plus a whole host of the day to day troubles that afflict football and its supporters.

In my role as secretary of the Viking Supporters Cooperative, I helped conceive, and run the IRWT campaign at Doncaster Rovers, which is a leader in fan engagement. This has attracted considerable praise and widespread acclaim for its achievements. Part of that responsibility also means I am a founder board director of the supporter's board at DRFC which again sets out to be a class leader. As usual I believe that we can and must work in partnership to achieve what we can for the benefit of all supporters.

My aims and interests would be to carry on helping out and being involved in all aspects of the work that the FSF are currently involved in. In recent years, following on from our reorganisation, we have made tremendous progress in all our campaign areas and that is a tremendous result for all the volunteers and staff that have been involved. I intend to carry on with the work as a board director, if elected, and guide and encourage the organisation to keep doing the right things for the benefit of all supporters.

Dave Pennington

I lobbied passionately for a single national supporter body and now want to contribute wholeheartedly to its successful establishment. As a member of the new Board I would work with fellow directors to ensure that the new organisation delivers fully on its integrated mission, in particular focusing on some key challenges:

Agreeing the delivery priorities that embrace the full scope of the new mission and assuring their delivery

Overseeing the integration of current SD and FSF employees into a cohesive single team matching their skills to the new organisation's priorities, and ensuring the individual and collective welfare of staff going through change

Establishing a framework to leverage additional volunteer expertise and input from across the organisation's membership

Ensuring that the new networks each develop to deliver for their own supporter community while also acting cohesively in the common interests of all supporters

Developing a strategy on all aspects of Supporter Ownership that reflects the current and future football landscape, including being ready to respond to a potential general election that could be imminent or some years away

On a personal level I would commit fully to these and other challenges, offering time, energy and vision alongside my previous track record in helping to deliver on many of both SD's and the FSF's previous initiatives. I would also draw on my past experience of working inside government including legislative and parliamentary process, handling ministers, and stakeholder engagement, that key projects will need to draw on.

I've worked for and been an activist with the FSF and a director of Supporters Direct.

I have experience of building and running supporters' organisations from the ground up at Arsenal and mentoring/assisting supporters at other clubs.

My background as a trade union official and activist equips me with a detailed knowledge and training in employment, equality and health & safety at work law and best practice which I've been able to use both in my work with the FSF and SD.

As a wheelchair user and regular home and away match-goer I can bring this perspective to the new organisation's deliberations.

I am a lifelong, third generation fan of Blackpool FC and am currently the Chair of Blackpool Supporters' Trust. I have become involved in football governance due to Blackpool being a "crisis club" under rogue ownership. I have been at the forefront of the campaign to remove the Oyston family from Blackpool but also to bring about much needed change in football governance as a whole.

I believe wholeheartedly that football without fans is nothing and our game appears to have been hijacked by corporate bodies who have little or no knowledge of what football means to its supporters and communities. Football fans need a voice and it is essential that fans and football authorities work together for the good of the game.

National supporter organisations are fundamental to this goal and I am enthusiastic about the possibility of representing fans in this way. I have business knowledge from my working life and man management/people skills is my area of expertise. I also have experience of working with the media.

I believe that if I am elected I can bring these skills to the role. My work on behalf of Blackpool Supporters' Trust over the past 3 and a half years has been a learning curve as we have shaped our strategies, built our membership and dealt with an increasingly impossible situation at our club.

To date we have remained strong, motivated and effective and have already worked with both FSF and SD on a regular basis on various initiatives.

These are uncertain but potentially exciting times for football fans and it would be a privilege to be part of a new organisation which will hopefully be at the forefront of the changes which are needed to protect and nurture football.

I have been part of the FSF's National Council for three terms and am eager to continue working in a new unified national supporters' organisation. Currently, I am the only fan representative on the national Fixtures Working Party where I represent the supporters' perspective in multi-agency meetings between public authorities and leagues when looking at how fixtures are to be allocated. Additionally, I am the co-opted Supporters Direct board member on behalf of the FSF, where I help to communicate between the two organisations. This is a position I feel very strongly about and will continue to support.

I have been a keen participant in structured dialogue meetings with the EFL where I try to represent the views of not just Port Vale fans, but all fans potentially impacted by EFL-wide issues. Beyond that I am part of the England Fans' Embassy team and have enjoyed supporting England fans abroad, most recently during the 2018 World Cup in Russia.

Previously, I chaired the PVFC Supporters' Club for five years. Currently, I volunteer as an SLO for the club, supporting all fans. I also write an article in the local paper weekly, write in every match day programme and am regularly interviewed by local and national media, both in written and verbal formats.

Prior to these positions, I worked as a trainer in a local college for over 17 years, where I worked with the homeless, young people with addictions and I won an award for writing a training programme aimed at teenage parents. This demonstrates my ability to speak openly about the most sensitive of subjects at all levels.

I am extremely passionate about equality and diversity. I would like to support the new organisation's aims in working towards a reduction in discrimination cases within football as a whole. I would also aim to explore ways of capturing wider audiences for clubs, especially encouraging more diverse groups to attend matches. I aim to be involved in initiatives which help improve fan experiences across the board. I am also very interested in the discussion around football governance and safe standing.

I passionately believe the voice of supporters must be heard and their views taken into account when decisions are being taken.

When issues and problems occur we need to make sure that our organisation is always available for supporters to contact, we must make sure our standing within the footballing authorities is high so that we are respected to such a level that they contact us to discuss issues as well as the organisation contacting them.

I believe it is a supporters right from the moment they leave their home to go to the match, until they return home, to be treated respectably by all who they meet, they should be safe and whether its travel or admission they should feel they have had value for money. Are we there yet? I don't believe we are. It is now time to move forward and I want to work with you all to help this happen.

At Crewe Alexandra who I have supported for over 38 years, I hold the position of a Supporters Liaison Officer. I am the link between the supporters and the club. I am also a member of the clubs Safety Advisory Group.

I have recently been a part of a small group of supporters who have formed the new Crewe Alexandra Supporters group the Railwaymen and hold the position of Group Liaison.

I am at present a member of the FSF services Ltd Board of Directors, the National Council, and also a member of the FSF Freelions Fans Embassy team which provide valuable help to England supporters abroad.

I believe my industrial relation experience developed as a union representative for ASLEF over a 14 year period, give me the skills to compliment other members of our new board of directors. My duties as an ASLEF representative include representing individual members in disputes with the company and disciplinary hearings, along with negotiating terms and conditions during negotiations with train operating companies. I also have the responsibilities of putting together yearly duty and annual leave rosters working within national rules and regulations.

I hope the experience and knowledge I have obtained put's me in a position to help our new organisation move forward to a position where their voices are not just heard but their views, policies and ideas will become even more influential and continue to make a real difference in football.

On my application for the Council, I concentrated on setting out my skills and experience in areas like governance and regulation, as I believe effective and informed lobbying on these themes will be very important.

However, anyone who aspires to be a Member of the Board needs to offer a wider range of qualities, including :

- leadership : the ability to set and demonstrate the values of the organisation in order to win the support of existing members and attract new ones
- the ability to challenge : holding the game's organising bodies and their partners to account, and doing the same for ourselves
- adaptability : being able to shift effort and priorities to take account of changing circumstances
- relevance : the ability to win the confidence of our members such that they know we are aiming to put their interests to the fore in everything we do

It is these qualities that will enable us to address the main challenges we face - a lack of effective regulation and scrutiny of the organising bodies, their pre-occupation with revenue generation to the exclusion of all else and a sense that the ordinary fan and their priorities matter less and less.

I believe I have these qualities ; and I believe I have the drive, energy and imagination needed to bring them to bear. I am by nature a placid individual, mainly calm and reflective. The plight of our game, and the ruinous way it is being run at the moment is something that genuinely worries me. We are in danger of becoming unpaid and unheard extras at our own sport ; I want to help to change that.
